Apogee Announces Windows 10 Compatibility for ONE, Duet and Quartet Audio Interfaces

Coming November 2017
Windows

Apogee is pleased to announce Windows 10 compatibility for the latest generations of ONE, Duet and Quartet USB audio interfaces. Customers who purchase the latest generation of these products will be able to register and download a Windows 10 compatible software installer from Apogee's website. Existing customers will also have access to the download. The software will be available in November 2017.

Rangsdorf, 17th October 2017 - The new Windows software installers will include a firmware update for the hardware, custom Apogee ASIO audio driver and PC compatible version of Apogee's Maestro application for controlling audio interface settings and low latency monitoring. All the same functionality currently available to Mac and iOS users will be available to Windows 10 users and the same interface can be used on either Mac, PC or iOS.

The Most Popular Audio Interfaces for Mac - Now Coming to PC

Apogee's ONE, Duet and Quartet have been industry standards for professional quality recording on Mac and utilized by countless professional artists to record hit songs over the past 10 years. These products started the home and portable studio revolution, providing music creators with simple solutions for recording uncompromised tracks outside of traditional studios. Now the award-winning sound quality of Apogee's most popular audio interfaces is available to music creators on Windows 10 devices.

Availability

New Windows 10 software installers for ONE, Duet and Quartet are expected to be available on Apogee's website November 2017. (1108 characters / 172 words)
